Since Herod had authority in Galilee, and since Jesus was a Galilean, Pilate must have thought he could get rid of the problem by giving Herod Antipas jurisdiction.

Herod, who had wanted to meet Jesus for some time, was willing to take on the assignment.

Asking question after question, Herod hoped he would see Jesus perform miracles. Jesus, however, responded with silence.

Frustrated, Herod and his soldiers mocked Jesus, gave him an elegant robe - fit for a king - and sent Him back to Pilate ... uncondemned.

Judas, meanwhile, was sorry for betraying his friend:

> He was seized with remorse and returned the thirty silver coins to the chief priests and the elders. "I have sinned," he said, "for I have betrayed innocent blood."

It was too late, however, for Judas to take back his actions:

> "What is that to us?" they replied. "That's your responsibility." So Judas threw the money into the temple and left. Then he went away and hanged himself.

What happened to the money he returned?

> The chief priests picked up the coins and said, "It is against the law to put this into the treasury, since it is blood money." So they decided to use the money to buy the potter's field as a burial place for foreigners. That is why it has been called the Field of Blood to this day.

In modern times, the "Field of Blood" is known as Akeldama.
